this anthology presents in two volumes a series of latin texts with english translation produced in britain during the period ad 450 1500 excerpts are taken from bede and other historians from the letters of women written from their monasteries from famous documents such as domesday book and magna carta and from accounts and legal documents all revealing the lives of individuals at home and on their travels across Britain and beyond it offers an insight into Latin writings on many subjects showing the important role of Latin in the multilingual society of medieval Britain in which Latin was the primary language of written communication and record and also developed particularly after the Norman Conquest through mutual influence with English and French. The thorough introductions to each volume provide a broad overview of the linguistic and cultural background while the individual texts are placed in their social, historical and linguistic context.

In this first in-depth and wide-ranging history of Christian conversion, David Kling examines the dynamic of turning to the Christian faith by individuals, families and people groups globally in reach and engaging recent methods and theories in conversion studies. The narrative progresses from early Christian beginnings in the Roman world to Christianity's expansion into Europe, the Americas, China, India and Africa. Although conversion is often associated with a particular strand of modern Christianity, evangelical and a particular type of experience, sudden and overwhelming when examined over two millennia it emerges as a phenomenon far more complex than any one-dimensional profile would suggest.
